THEN... the Space Age challenged the meaning and purpose of college education. As traditional views of man's capabilities have been re-evaluated, new impetus has been given to his desire to find order in the environment. The search for a meaningful pattern has been extended to cover the newly accessible realms of space.

NOW.... we at Barnard have gained a widened perspective. The College, while itself preparing to meet increasing demands, has helped to prepare us to accept our positions in the vanguard of the new era.

AND.... the Space Age has effected in us a growing awareness of our potential and our duty to actualize it. Our generation must supply not only the science and technology, but also the philosophy which must necessarily accompany discoveries, in order to explain to man the meaning of his progress.

Where Barnard was born—in a brownstone

On October 7, 1889, fourteen freshmen mounted the steps at 343 Madison Avenue, a high-stooped brownstone, the headquarters of the newly-established women's college of Columbia University. Frederick A. P. Barnard, President of Columbia University, said of the downtown location: ". . . the temptations of the City although different in character, are no more corrupting than . . . (those) of the country, and whatever advantage there may be in a country place is dearly purchased . . . at the cost of sacrificing the convenience, the intellectual stimulus, the opportunities of observation, and the many other advantages which students . . . enjoy in great cities. It is my well-settled belief that in the selection of a site for a college, the most populous town should be preferred to any location in the country, however apparently tempting." President Barnard unfortunately did not live to see the opening of the college which bears his name.

The physical facilities were poor. Two rooms were fitted as classrooms, and the butler's pantry served as a locker room. Six subjects were offered to the first freshman class: Mathematics, Greek, Latin, and English, all required, and a choice of either French or German. With these limited facilities and a total budget of $7,500, which exceeded the expected income, Barnard College began to develop the spirit and tradition which we have inherited.

The Hockey Club—if you couldn't knot the tie, you couldn't play.

In 1896, Barnard moved to new and larger quarters on Broadway, between 119th and 120th Streets, opposite the new Morningside Heights campus of Columbia University. Fiske Hall served as a dormitory, while the adjacent Brinckerhoff and Milbank Halls contained the academic and administrative facilities.

The atmosphere was much more favorable to the growth of the college than the previous cramped conditions. Student Government, Bulletin, Mortarboard, and the Athletic Association began. The Banjo Club, Hockey Club, and Baseball Team were flourishing organizations. Chapters of seven national sororities—then called "fraternities"—were formed.

After a few years of existence, the need for fraternities was reconsidered, and it was concluded that "the evils of fraternities as they are at present organized and conducted at Barnard College on the whole outweigh the advantages, and that the element of secrecy is especially harmful." In 1912, fraternities were abolished by student resolution.

A wandering minstrel I—so join the Banjo Club (1900).

At the turn of the century, our predecessors pondered these problems:

Should a Barnard student, walking "among the dusty roads and the piles of stone in the new Columbia grounds, scan all the faces she meets so that she may bow to acquaintances, or shall she gaze steadily into space, and cut her second cousin or her intimate friend as she passes within three feet of him?"

If Columbia professors would only introduce the students to each other, so that after arguing with a male student in class all semester, it would be proper to bow to him when meeting on the street . . .

In 1903, the sophomores challenged the freshmen to an informal athletic contest, of which the main feature was to be a tug of war. The costumes were an interesting combination of middy blouses and Pysche knots. These first Greek Games gradually evolved into their present form, as the cultural elements were given more emphasis. Students learned to throw the discus, hurdle for form and race while carrying a burning torch.

In 1903, Mrs. A. A. Anderson, the donor of Milbank Hall, gave the College the three and one-half acres from 116th to 119th Street, bounded by Broadway and Claremont Avenue, thus securing the Barnard campus against the encroachment of a rapidly-growing New York. A dormitory, Brooks Hall, named after the Reverend Arthur Brooks, the first Chairman of the Board of Trustees, was built in 1907.

In 1910, Barnard came of age when one of her alumnae, Virginia C. Gildersleeve '97, was appointed Dean, in which capacity she served for thirty-six years. Under her guidance and leadership, the College expanded, despite the Great Depression and two world wars.

In 1915, to commemorate his fiftieth year in America, Jacob H. Schiff, first Treasurer of Barnard, donated funds for an additional building to house student organizations, athletic, medical and lunchroom facilities. The lobby of Barnard Hall is called "Jake" in fond remembrance of the man who was so instrumental in the development of the College. An additional dormitory, Hewitt Hall, was built in 1925.

And, then, doctor, she begins to stick pins in the doll . . .

If Randolph could see me now . . .

The original six-course curriculum was continually diversified, to keep pace with growing intellectual and cultural demands. The practice of majoring, obtaining at least twenty-eight credits in one subject, was soon instituted. The student was constantly given more choice in her curriculum.

From its inception, Barnard has been a liberal arts college, founded as an ideal of educating young women. Courses such as cooking and home economics were never offered, since it was felt that they had no place in the arts curriculum. The Barnard girl is taught how to learn. With this ability, she is able to develop new skills and acquire more knowledge.

In 1947, Dean Gildersleeve retired, and Millicent Carey McIntosh became Dean of Barnard College. In 1952, she became the first president of the College. Under President McIntosh's guidance, the College has continued to expand.

Since 1958, the campus has taken on a new appearance; a new library has been constructed, and a new dormitory and expanded kitchen facilities are under construction.

Miss Jean Palmer, General Secretary and Director of Development, is one of the busiest women in a college of harried people. However, she is never too busy to smile.

Dr. Henry Boorse, Dean of Faculty and Professor of Physics, is an unfailingly sympathetic person. He is always willing to listen to students' comments on the College in general, or physics in particular.

Mrs. Helen Law, Registrar, has the hard job of co-ordinating the academic activities of more than 1,400 students—a job performed admirably.

Into each life some rain must fall! As Bursar, it is Miss Frances Barry's duty to collect tuition and other fees each semester. On the brighter side, student and faculty pay checks are distributed by her.

To Barnard applicants, Miss Helen M. McCann's signature on the letter is regarded with equal proportions of hope and fear. Barnard students know the Director of Admissions as a congenial person.

The Public Relations Office, directed by Miss Betty Pezzoni, is the official link between Barnard and the "outside world." Any item relevant to the history, development, and activities of the College, its faculty and students, can be found in the excellent Public Relations files.

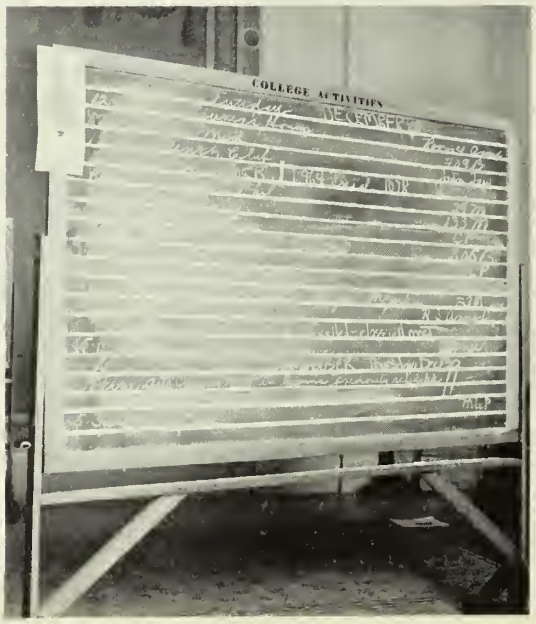
Dr. Marjory J. Nelson, College Physician, assisted by an able staff, is responsible for the health of the student body.

The Associate Alumnae serve the College in three ways: by interpreting Barnard to the community; by keeping secondary school students informed about Barnard; and by aiding in the support of the College. Mrs. Mary A. Bliss is the Executive Secretary. Mrs. Rita Kelley is Secretary.

The Placement Office, maintained by the College as a service to students and alumnae, offers assistance in obtaining full and part-time positions during and after college. As seniors, we appreciate more each day the work of Mrs. Ethel S. Paley and her staff.

The many extracurricular activities of the College are the domain of one woman, Miss Katherine R. Goodwin, Director of College Activities. She is a constant source of inspiration.

Mrs. June Zydney, Secretary to Miss Goodwin



The Wollman Library is the scholarly center of the College. In its peaceful atmosphere, girls do research, study, read, listen to music, and look at fine arts prints. The library staff, headed by Mrs. Esther Greene, is always helpful and cooperative.

Drama

Switch on Shakespeare—Women played men's roles

It was not until 1913 that the first permanent theater group, Wigs and Cues, was formed, although theater had been a part of Barnard from its inception. Thirty-five years later, the group came of age, when men were, at last, cast in male roles. In 1949, Mr. Dolph Sweet became the company's first permanent director.

Minor Latham Playhouse was constructed in 1952, and the Barnard Drama Workshop was formed. In 1959, production was extended through the summer, as Miss Mildred Dunnock and Mr. Sweet directed a summer workshop.

The Gilbert and Sullivan Society, formed in the mid-fifties, has played an important role in the College and the New York City communities. Devotees of operettas come semi-annually to the G & S presentations. Children of the Morningside area are frequently guests of the group, and derive great pleasure from their delightful performances.

Other groups have tried their hand at theatrical production, with excellent results. Performances of the language clubs and the annual Junior Show are well-received.

According to several social critics, there is a strange disease running rampant through the ranks of women in the United States. This disease has been termed "ironic resignation," for want of a better name. Its manifestations are easily discernible; the first symptoms appear at an early age, somewhere between five and 13 years. At this time, the young girl begins to realize that intelligence, curiosity, and conviction, qualities natural to her, are not conducive to great success in social circles.

Thereafter, the symptoms multiply rapidly. The intelligent girl begins to assume a passive rather than active role in the process of her education. She restrains herself from talking as much as she used to. She rarely mentions books she has read or problems she has thought about. She restrains herself from thinking too much.

As she grows older, she further convinces herself that she must conceal most of her abilities and much of her strength of character in order to survive socially.

A diagnosis of "ironic resignation" might be applicable in some cases, but it is surely not universal. Witness the Barnard girl, who has refused to fall prey to the malady. The activities in which she participates during her four years of college indicate that she does not attempt to stifle either her social or her intellectual abilities.

Some students find it difficult to keep their convictions quiet. For them, Student Government has provided an ideal outlet.

THE HONOR CODE

We, the students of Barnard College, do hereby resolve to uphold the honor of the College by refraining from every form of dishonesty in our academic work and in our college life. We consider it dishonest to ask for, give or receive help in examinations or quizzes, or to use in them any papers or books in any manner not authorized by the instructors, or to present oral or written work that is not entirely our own, except in such way as may be approved by the instructor. We pledge to do all that is in our own power to create a spirit of honesty and honor for its own sake.

Others, not so talkative, have used the written word as their vehicle.

WE ARE DELIGHTED . . .

to salute the Barnard girls who have handled our temporary job assignments so well over the years.

Students, teachers and school clerks find it pleasant and profitable to work through our Service during long or short vacations, and we look forward to seeing many new applicants this summer. Mothers and older sisters, too, can use their spare time to advantage doing temporary work. There are no fees to applicants.

WE SUPPLY QUALIFIED OFFICE WORKERS

Over twelve thousand members of the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College welcome 1961, the newest class to join us.

It was alumnae who started the Barnard library and placement office, ran a cooperative dormitory for undergraduates, and purchased Barnard Camp for the College. It is alumnae who still administer our Student Loan Fund and advise on vocations.

We know that like their predecessors, 1961 alumnae will find pleasure in helping future undergraduates.

Acknowledgments

No one but an editor-in-chief can know the importance of the coordination of individual talents in publishing a yearbook. I feel that I have been particularly fortunate this year in having a staff which has demonstrated such coordination. I would like to express my appreciation to and every Mortarboard staff member. In addition, I would like to express my special thanks to:

Miss Katherine Goodwin — whose sympathetic ear was always available in times of "crisis" and whose encouragement was a morale-booster,

Mr. Robin Luehrs, C '61 — whose artwork enhances this book,

Miss Betty Pezzoni and her staff for their invaluable assistance in obtaining hard-to-find information and photographs,

The faculty and the senior class — for their interest in the yearbook and their cooperation with the staff,

Miss Inez Nelbach — for her "detective work" in the identification of photographs,

Ruth Schwartz — for her essay on student government,

Nell Green of Apeda Studios, our yearbook photographers, for her excellent job on the senior portraits and her contribution to staff spirit,

Mr. Charles Clegg of the Comet Press for his patient and skillful assistance,

Mrs. June Zydney and Miss Barbara Poe of the College Activities Office, and Mrs. Florence Bridges, Director of Student Mail,

Messrs. Miles David and Jack Freeman — who contributed ideas, offered objective criticism, and produced the right word or phrase when no one else could think of it,

Mortarboard 1899 and Mortarboard 1901, from which the quotes on page 12 were taken,

Rollie McKenna, Paul Freireich — for the use of their photographs.

Again, to all who aided in publishing Mortarboard '61, thank you.
